people, the heroism of union action, and the determination to defend traditional liberties (At the same time, of course, these films portray and reflect the more problematic strands of populist patriotism in Thirties political activism). In their determination not to use history merely to create a legitimating heritage, the authors of Traditions of Independence have neglected to examine more closely the history of this affirmative aspect of political cinema. The analysis may be more difficult than the one they have directed at the oppositionists' attempt to criticize the structures of domination, but it may prove no less fruitful as a source of guides to strategy.

JOHN H. WEISS
Cornell University

INDEX TO VOLUME 36

Barker, Rex. Review, 36:4, p. 83.
Benson, Tom and Anderson, Carolyn. "The Rhetorical Structure of Frederick Wiseman's Model," 36:4, p. 30.
Bernstein, Matthew. "Berlin, Symphony of City (1927)," 36:4, p. 5.
Blumenberg, Richard M. "College Course File: Film Planning and Scripting," 36:3, p. 65.
Boyle, James F. "Observing the Feature Screenplay As a Unified Structure: Twenty-Six Things Found on the First Three Pages," 36:3, p. 58.
Cadbury, William. "Author's Response to Casebier," 36:3, p. 89.
Casbier, Allan. Review, 36:3, p. 85.
Edgerton, Gary. "College Course File: An Introduction to the American Film Industry," 36:1, p. 42.
Ellis, Jack C. "The Final Years of British Documentary as the Grierson Movement," 36:4, p. 41.
Fielding, Raymond. "Recent Electronic Innovations in Professional Motion Picture Production," 36:2, p. 43.
Fisher, Lucy. Review, 36:1, p. 57.
Hank, Stephen. "College Course File: Film Planning," 36:2, p. 50.
Leff, Leonard J. "Resources For the Screen Writing Teacher," 36:3, p. 7.
Lent, John A. "Asian Cinema: A Selected International Bibliography Part I: East Asia, Featuring Japan," 36:3, p. 75.
Lowry, Edward. "Genre and Enunciation: The Case of Horror," 36:2, p. 13.
Miller, William. "The Matter of Screenplay Structure," 36:3, p. 35.
Miller, William. "An Interview With Terrence McDonnell," 36:3, p. 51.
Nielsen, Michael. "Hollywood's High Frontier: The Emergence of Electronic Cinema," 36:2, p. 31.
Porter, Vincent. "The Three Phases of Film and Television," 36:1, p. 5.
Rabinovitz, Lauren. Review, 36:1, p. 61.
Rockett, W. H. Review, 36:2, p. 64.
Sobchack, Vivian. "16 Ways to Pronounce 'Potato' ": Authority and Authorship in Poto and Cabengo," 36:4, p. 21.
Stam, Robert. "College Course File: Third World Cinema," 36:4, p. 50.
Stegeman, Allan." The Large-Screen Film: A Viable Entertainment Alternative to High Definition Television," 36:2, p. 21.
Straayer, Chris. Review, 36:1, p. 65.
Thomas, David O. "Moments, Experiential Density and Immediacy: The Screenplay As Blueprint For Communion," 36:3, p. 43.
Tomasulo, Frank P. "The Spectater-in-the-Tube: The Rhetoric of Donahue," 36:2, p. 5.
Viola, Bill. "Video As Art," 36:1, p. 36.
Wald, Malvin. "The Hollywood Market Place," 36:3, p. 15.
Weiss, John. Review, 36:4, p. 81.
Williams, Brien R. and Fulton, Cheryl. "A Study of Visual Style and Creativity in Television," 36:1, p. 23.
Wolfe, Charles. "Modes of Discourse in Thirties Social Documentary: The Shifting "I" of Native Land," 36:4, p. 13.
Wolff, Jurgen M. "How to Pitch Ideas," 36:3, p. 23.

people, the heroism of union action, and the determination to defend traditional liberties (At the same time, of course, these films portray and reflect the more problematic strands of populist patriotism in Thirties political activism). In their determination not to use history merely to create a legitimating heritage, the authors of Traditions of Independence have neglected to examine more closely the history of this affirmative aspect of political cinema. The analysis may be more difficult than the one they have directed at the oppositionists' attempt to criticize the structures of domination, but it may prove no less fruitful as a source of guides to strategy.

JOHN H. WEISS
Cornell University

INDEX TO VOLUME 36

Barker, Rex. Review, 36:4, p. 83.
Benson, Tom and Anderson, Carolyn. "The Rhetorical Structure of Frederick Wiseman's Model," 36:4, p. 30.
Bernstein, Matthew. "Berlin, Symphony of City (1927)," 36:4, p. 5.
Blumenberg, Richard M. "College Course File: Film Planning and Scripting," 36:3, p. 65.
Boyle, James F. "Observing the Feature Screenplay As a Unified Structure: Twenty-Six Things Found on the First Three Pages," 36:3, p. 58.
Cadbury, William. "Author's Response to Casebier," 36:3, p. 89.
Casbier, Allan. Review, 36:3, p. 85.
Edgerton, Gary. "College Course File: An Introduction to the American Film Industry," 36:1, p. 42.
Ellis, Jack C. "The Final Years of British Documentary as the Grierson Movement," 36:4, p. 41.
Fielding, Raymond. "Recent Electronic Innovations in Professional Motion Picture Production," 36:2, p. 43.
Fisher, Lucy. Review, 36:1, p. 57.
Hank, Stephen. "College Course File: Film Planning," 36:2, p. 50.
Leff, Leonard J. "Resources For the Screen Writing Teacher," 36:3, p. 7.
Lent, John A. "Asian Cinema: A Selected International Bibliography Part I: East Asia, Featuring Japan," 36:3, p. 75.
Lowry, Edward. "Genre and Enunciation: The Case of Horror," 36:2, p. 13.
Miller, William. "The Matter of Screenplay Structure," 36:3, p. 35.
Miller, William. "An Interview With Terrence McDonnell," 36:3, p. 51.
Nielsen, Michael. "Hollywood's High Frontier: The Emergence of Electronic Cinema," 36:2, p. 31.
Porter, Vincent. "The Three Phases of Film and Television," 36:1, p. 5.
Rabinovitz, Lauren. Review, 36:1, p. 61.
Rockett, W. H. Review, 36:2, p. 64.
Sobchack, Vivian. "16 Ways to Pronounce 'Potato' ": Authority and Authorship in Poto and Cabengo," 36:4, p. 21.
Stam, Robert. "College Course File: Third World Cinema," 36:4, p. 50.
Stegeman, Allan." The Large-Screen Film: A Viable Entertainment Alternative to High Definition Television," 36:2, p. 21.
Straayer, Chris. Review, 36:1, p. 65.
Thomas, David O. "Moments, Experiential Density and Immediacy: The Screenplay As Blueprint For Communion," 36:3, p. 43.
Tomasulo, Frank P. "The Spectater-in-the-Tube: The Rhetoric of Donahue," 36:2, p. 5.
Viola, Bill. "Video As Art," 36:1, p. 36.
Wald, Malvin. "The Hollywood Market Place," 36:3, p. 15.
Weiss, John. Review, 36:4, p. 81.
Williams, Brien R. and Fulton, Cheryl. "A Study of Visual Style and Creativity in Television," 36:1, p. 23.
Wolfe, Charles. "Modes of Discourse in Thirties Social Documentary: The Shifting "I" of Native Land," 36:4, p. 13.
Wolff, Jurgen M. "How to Pitch Ideas," 36:3, p. 23.